

CHANCELLOR ATTENDS SPECIAL CONVOCATION

My Column by Me

Few will get farther than this, so I'll wish everyone a Merry Christmas now.

It comes from one of the professors, of course, and is probably the best example obtainable as to how bad a thing a preposition is with which to end a sentence. I quote the words of a diminutive pickaninny:

Dat's de wustest storm I ever done come in out of from!!

Good day, sir. Do you want a haircut?
No, all.

So the chef that cooks the "Chowder" thinks that some of My work is not quite original, does he?

There was so much corn in his ragoulash that it was difficult to tell it from succolash.

What sort of food would you say soup is?

It's not a food at all; it's a language.

English as she is spoke:

There was a young man named Colquhoun

Whquhou meandered intquhou a salquhou

Where he caused much adquhou

With his intention tqhou

Hitch-hike to the mqhoum by balquhou.

In Switzerland, so My European friends tell Me, they take the census by counting the echoes and dividing by the number of mountain peaks.

Ode on an Oyster

Happy is the Oyster!

He stays in bed for good.

And if he ever does come out

He generally gets stewed.

She was passionately fond of him, but when he presented her with an engagement ring that featured cut glass instead of a diamond, she became thoroughly angry about it. He hadn't realized that, though love is blind, it is not stone blind.

If you are a Sociology student you have undoubtedly come across that interesting little volume: Vice in Chicago; by Professor Reckless.

M. E.

Tis Odoma

Little centipedes remind us

We're as green as any lime

When we try to leave behind us

Footprints in the sands of Time.

How do you get down off an elephant?

You don't; you get it off a duck.

(If you get this one, hold on to it; it's wanted for killing the Dead Sea.)

Department of Ancient Humour:

This week we have one of these college stories which recurs with astonishing regularity every year before Leap Year:

It was in a seminar that the professor caught one of the students gazing abstractedly out of the window. He continued the discussion for a while, then asked suddenly:

Mr. Smith, what is your opinion on this subject?

Ah,—er—um—I find it rather difficult to condense my views into words, sir.

But surely something you may have read on the matter will contribute to the discussion.

It's rather difficult sir, to single out one more or less isolated idea from such a huge variety of writings as bear on the matter.

Lone Artsman Invades Sanctuary Of McGill Plumbers

Tables Turned As Engineers Sing "I'm An Artsman"

by B.A.

Amidst cries of "Throw that Artsman out!" "Take his pants off," and get that guy out here," one of the bravest of the Artsmen invaded the holy precincts of the Engineering Faculty at their annual banquet on Friday.

Gracefully entering the Union ballroom and reciting his favorite morsel from the prophets which he learned in the special course of Bulgarian 17B (without lab), he calmly walked up to the front of the crowd and cheerfully announced that all Engineers were to join him

Toronto Officer Disagrees With Principal James

Toronto Syllabus Said to Be Wider More Interesting

Lt.-Col. Madill, officer commanding the University of Toronto contingent of the C.O.T.C. disagrees with Principal James on several points concerning C.O.T.C. training, it was announced from Toronto.

Lt.-Col. Madill stated that the Toronto students did not have the "growing resentment against the monotony of the present syllabus." Col. Madill stated "that situation hasn't existed in those terms here."

Col. Madill stated that his university had a wider syllabus of training, and that they had the fullest co-operation of the district headquarters and other units in obtaining modern fighting equipment.

He also stated that credit was given in the army to men with C.O.T.C. training. He said that a man recommended from his unit was sent straight to an advance training centre and was not required to go through basic training.

In welcoming Mr. Wilson, the Governor-General paid high tribute to the new chancellor's contribution to the war effort as head of the British Purchasing Commission in Washington, and as representative in North America of the British Minister of Air Craft Production.

"I do not think any more suitable person could have been found for this important office," he said. "He possesses in abundance the inestimable gifts of kindness, understanding and sympathy, and he will, therefore, endear himself not only to his colleagues on the Board of Governors, and the members of the teaching faculties, but also to the many young men and women who will pass through these famous buildings."

Greater Responsibilities.

Mr. Wilson took office at a time when McGill and "all other universities are faced with perhaps greater responsibilities than ever in the course of their history. His Excellency stated. "It will be the task of those who are now students to deal with many of the complicated problems which will be the appalling legacy of war. We have learned by bitter experience that only young men and women possess the physical stamina and the mental alertness to handle the practical details which war brings in its train. . . . Just as this is a young man's war so will it have to be a young man's peace. Its success or failure will be measured by its durability, and that will depend not only on the soundness of its foundations, but also on the capacity of our people to make it workable. The training for that capacity is being given here in McGill and other universities throughout the civilized world."

Wilson's Address.

In delivering the Convocation Address, Mr. Wilson expressed the hope that McGill would "continue to deserve and receive the support of many friends." "Universities owe much to benefactors," the Chancellor stated, "and McGill was particularly happy in the benefactions of Thomas Workman, Sir William Macdonald, Lord Strathcona, Peter Redpath, William and Percival Molson, and many others who have contributed greatly to its growth.

Addressing himself particularly to the graduates, Mr. Wilson declared that he did not believe in the saying "that the happiest days are school days, except for boys who

McGill Cagers Will Oppose No. 1 Wireless Tomorrow

New M.B.L. Schedule Arranged Because of Lachine's Withdrawal

Four Teams Left in Loop To Compete Tomorrow

Tomorrow night the Montreal Basketball League will resume the regularly scheduled Tuesday Doubleheaders at the Pine Street Gym. With the withdrawal of the Lachine R.C.A.F. team, a new schedule was hastily drawn up by the league manager and those games played against the Flyers will be erased from the standings. The four remaining squads, McGill, Sir George Williams, Orlers and R.C.A.F. Wireless School will meet in the first games of the newly arranged league tomorrow.

The Redmen having scored a clean sweep in their previous meeting with the Wireless School to the score of 27-19 will again line up against the Queen Mary boys. The flyers will undoubtedly miss Fleet-footed Joey Richman popular coach of the R.C.A.F. has been posted elsewhere.

The Oilers after thoroughly smearing the Red Team in an exhibition match last Tuesday will trot out against the not so easily beaten Georgians who have shown definitely tough competition against the other teams. The College boys from Drummond street skinned through a one point victory against McGill but were in turn nosed out by the Oilers. The slick Oilers floor perhaps the smoothest, most dangerous squad in the League seem to be running away from the pack like Les Canadiens down at the Forum but their streak is bound to end soon (as did Canadiens) and the Georgians and McGill seem to be the ones capable of the upsets.

Coach Van Wagner's line up for the opening game will remain the same as for other games. On defense Robinson seems to be loom- ing up as a star. Hard fighting, little talked about this new addition to the squad impresses all with his aggressiveness. Other stars Jerry Leonard and Leo Rosent- veig as well as George Davidson and Ed Kaneb are turning out the sweetest passing plays this side of heaven and intend to increase their score in the win column against the Flying Radiomen from the No. 1 School. Manny Shacter, Mahon, Haring and Deason have shown plenty of stuff so far this year and their ability will be tested again tomorrow night.

The new schedule is as follows:— Dec. 14 — Wireless R.C.A.F. vs. McGill; Orlers vs. Georgians. Jan. 11 — McGill vs. Georgians; Orlers vs. Wireless R.C.A.F. Jan. 18—Oilers vs. McGill; Geo- rgians vs. Wireless R.C.A.F. Jan. 25—Georgians vs. Orlers; Mc- Gill vs. Wireless R.C.A.F. Feb. 1 — Georgians vs. McGill; Wireless R.C.A.F. vs. Orlers. Feb. 8—McGill vs. Orlers; Wire- less R.C.A.F. vs. Georgians. Feb. 15—Oilers vs. Georgians.

Softball Loop Ends This Week

Finals to Be Played On Wednesday

The Inter-Unit Softball League, will close the season this week with semi-final games scheduled for today and tomor- row. The two top teams in each section will play off and the winning teams in the two sec- tions will meet on Wednesday to determine the champions. Leaders in section 1 are the Independents with C.O.T.C. (L) a close second. In the other sec- tion is the team representing the No. 9 R.C.A.F. leading fol- lowed by the C.A.U.C. Scient- ists.

Today's game will see the Army "Scientists" play the Inde- pendents. The match is sched- uled to take place in the Gym. at 5:00 p.m. and if the same rivalry that has existed throughout the year remains a very exciting competition is in store for all spectators.

Tomorrow will see C.O.T.C. (L) face No. 9 R.C.A.F. and the winning teams in these two matches will meet on Wednes- day and Thursday at 5:15 p.m. to determine the League Cham- pions.

This year's softball league has been the most successful to-date only one defaulted game being recorded. Interest has been higher than ever before and the ball play- ing not only better but much keener than in previous years. With four distinctly different units represent- ed in the playoffs these should be worth watching.

Queens Debate Holds No Union With U.S.

Kingston, Dec. 12.—(CUP)—In a debate held by the Queen's Debating Union the unanimous decision of the judges was given to the two who argued against the resolution before the House, that "Political union with the United States would advance the public welfare of Can- ada."

Those speaking for the affirma- tive contended that political union with the U.S. would enable Canada to develop her economy much more fully than it is today, and that the living standard of Canadians would be raised; also that the French- Canadian problem and the dilemma of conflict between provincial and federal power would be solved. They argued that American goods would be made cheaper for Cana- dians and that Canadian production would find a larger domestic mar- ket in the union.

Opposing these contentions the negative stated that Canadians would be almost politically voice- less in the new government, and pointed out that the American sys- tem of government was less demo- cratic than the Canadian. It was argued that the action would weak- en the British Commonwealth, the final bulwark of the world to armed aggression. It was also pointed out that Canadian industry and labor would move south. Power- ful American interests, it was main- tained, would employ Canada's re- sources as they pleased and Canada would become a commercial ap- pendage to American industry.

When the resolution was thrown open to the house all who spoke were against union.

Then there was the misguided Yank who landed in France and cried dramatically "LaFollet, we are here!"

Faculty Sports Delegates Named

Interest in Athletics Is Asked For

The Students' Athletics Council at its last meeting decided, due to the slump in Intramural Sport which is evident at the present time, it might be advisable to go back to Inter-Faculty and Inter- class Competition and have appoint- ed faculty representatives as fol- lows:

Arts, Norman Halford; Science, Al. Chalkin; Commerce, Geo. Frank, Engineers, Rex Freeman; Law, Alex. Stalker; The Meds, Dents and Grads are to be invited to ap- point representatives also.

These men are to interview the various classes in their respective faculties and endeavour to arouse interest in the Intramural Pro- gramme and have sports repre- sentatives appointed immediately in Basketball, Volleyball and Cam- pus Hockey.

All students should participate in at least one sport per season and with the unequalled opportunities and facilities available at McGill all who wish can be accommodated on one team or other in their fa- vorite sport.

The Intramural hockey league at the Forum which is organized on an interunit basis is enjoying an enthusiastic response, but only takes care of about forty students whereas there must be at least 500 students who have or who wish to play. It is to take care of the aver- age student that this drive is taking place.

The leagues organized at the present time will continue to operate and after the holidays it is hoped the response will be such, that on the new Interfaculty basis a new league will be organized to take care of the masses.

Students are advised to sign on the sheets that will be found on the various notice boards and also to see their faculty sports repre- sentative.

If there are any students who are not aware of the facilities for their particular sport, they are advised to get in touch with the Athletics Of- fice.

COSMO-B.W.I. Societies Hold Joint Xmas Party

The Cosmopolitan Club is joining the British West Indian Society on Saturday to hold their fourth annual Christmas Party in the Union Ball-room. The organization of this party has been entrusted by the ex- ecutives of the two clubs to a committee of three, embodying two representatives of each club.

This event is an annual af- fair, having been held on the last week-end before the Christmas holidays by the two clubs every year since the Brit- ish West Indian Society was formed. It takes the form of an all-out party with a number of novelty features, which are a little different each year, but always in spirit the same.

The year before last, follow- ing upon the Engineers Campus Queen contest, the Christmas party was highlighted by a "Campus Casanova" contest. The judges included the "Campus Queen" and two other co-eds. The Campus casanova chosen was Jimmie Quayle, a first year student from Shanghai,

Daily Interviews Earl Of Athlone

Governor General Has Brilliant Career

His Excellency, the Earl of Athlone, the Governor General of Canada, attended the Convo- cation on Friday in his official capacity as Visitor to the Uni- versity. Associated in this way with various universities throughout Canada, His Excel- lency has taken a very active interest in education.

Educated at Eton, and the Royal Military College at Sand- hurst, His Excellency disclosed in an interview with The Daily, that his studies were mainly of a classical nature. While at Eton, he took an active interest in athletics playing English rug- by. He has retained an interest in this sport and, while Gov- ernor-General of the Union of South Africa, often visited the University at Cape Town to see the "Eleven" in action.

Well-known in literary cir- cles, the Earl of Athlone, has done much writing in an unoffi- cial capacity, and does a good deal of reading. He bears LL.D. degrees from Edinburgh, Cambridge, and Queen's, and a D.C.L. from Oxford.

There are worse things than this. Witness the embarrassment of one unhappy soldier who had taken his saxophone to camp with him. One day, to his extreme annoyance, he heard someone blowing it, so in his best barrack manner he yelled, "Who's that zif-zif playing my sax?" But it was the Meutenant who struck his head around the corner and said, "I'm that zif-zif!"

The soldier had to give a free sax lesson to get out of that particular situation.

'End of World' Prophesied

Convocation Startled By Mystery-Woman by CLEMAN

The Convocation was progressing in its characteristic sedate manner, Dean A. L. Walsh, head of the Fa- culty of Dentistry, approached the microphone to present the candi- dates for dental degrees, when a middle-aged woman, dressed in black, walked up a central aisle of the orchestra and stepped up on the platform.

Before such dignitaries as His Ex- cellency the Earl of Athlone, Gov- ernor-General of Canada, the Rt. Rev. John Dixon, Lord Bishop of Montreal, and Chancellor Morris Wilson, President of the Royal Bank of Canada, this so-far uniden- tified woman took the microphone from Dean Walsh, said "Pardon me—I want you to know that I have been given the gift of prophecy," and proceeded to announce to a startled audience that the end of the world was at hand!

Unable to believe that such a thing was actually happening, the audience listened stunned as she continued. "It is the judgment of the Lord.—The bride of glory will appear."

At this point, Registrar Mat- thews approached the microphone but was halted by the outcry "Don't touch me — Don't you dare touch me!" Just at this interesting stage, some one had the presence of mind to turn off the microphone, but she continued her rant. People near the front say they heard her exclaim, "I know you think I'm mad!" Two stalwarts of the Scarlet Key then escorted the woman quietly from the stage. As she passed the reporters table she called out a name similar to "Defoe" and an address on Adam Street. Investiga- tion of this address has so far proven futile.

Just as she was going out of the door, the woman was heard to say something that sounded like "God" and "publicity". Reporters attempt- ing to interview the woman were staved off by the Scarlet Key.

Lone Artisan Invades Sanctuary of McGill Plumbers

In a sing-song, Thereupon all the Plumbers stood up, placed their right hands over their hearts and under the skillful guidance of our Artisan sang, "I'm an Artisan, I'm an Artisan, I'm an Artisan, full of cheer, but rather be an Artisan, than a ... Engineer!"

The Plumbers were hoaxed, the guests were hoaxed, in fact, if Artisan hadn't kept his sharp wits about him, he would be minus a morsel of clothing. The fact is that he vacated the premises "ausstittet que possible", "quam celerrime"; in fact he scrambled.

It is true that he vamoosed before the unwary Plumbers could get their hands on him, but the fact still remains that he used the tactics of the Trojan horse which he learned in his research of the Classics, to beguile the unsuspecting, re-velling Engineers.

Surprising several Engineers by the fact that Artisan is also able to partake of malted spirits, Artisan showed his prowess by consuming forty-one beers, putting the entire Engineers Undergrad Society to shame.

Boston Psychology Professor Analyzes Sinatra's Appeal

BY LOWELL TROWBRIDGE

Boston University Instructor, Member of the Staff of the Boston City Hospital and the Washington Hospital

A tempest in a teapot has been promoted about Mr. Frank Sinatra, and the effect of his singing upon his young and feminine audience. I use the word "promoted" intentionally as the whole performance has been skillfully devised according to the laws of crowd psychology. Someone, probably a manager or publicity man, is exploiting to the fullest extent juvenile suggestibility, in a harmless and highly profitable manner.

Mr. Sinatra is a very agreeable young man who scarcely deserves the nasty things that reviewers (mostly masculine) have said about him. After all, the poor fellow has to make a living—think of all the tonsils and adenoids he has to inspect every performance, and without a scrap of medical interest in the display!

A Sinatra performance fulfills all the requirements for effective influence of crowds. In the first place, the singer has prestige. His presence here is the climax to a powerful publicity campaign, telling of his immense influence over his audiences. Secondly, the magic effect of his singing operates only in crowds, as it is generally conceded that a solitary radio listener of the right age is unaffected as she would be in the theatre setting. It is widely known that in crowds people tend to unconsciously imitate the behavior of those around them and that they lack a feeling of responsibility when they become part of a crowd. Without conscience to bother, one can indulge in all sorts of unconventional behavior.

Thirdly, it is music which makes the appeal of Sinatra and music is the art which most easily stirs the emotions. That is why armies march to war to the music of bands. Fourthly, conditions are very good for sympathy. Sympathy is unconscious imitation—a sympathetic response on the part of an audience. It is sympathy which makes us tighten our muscles when a movie hero dangles from the to McGill's history and traditions. "It is a fine thing," he said, "to have a splendid past to treasure, but young people now graduating will be glad that their university had also a living present and their own forward-looking spirit."

In presenting Mr. Wilson for the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, Vice-Principal Brittain referred to the chancellor's "services to human welfare, to philanthropic and cultural services covering every phase of our national life."

"Any University worthy to exist in the post-war world must be equipped to discover, to nourish and to develop the type of being destined to explore these frontiers of science and thought," said the Vice-Principal.

In opening the Convocation, Vice-Chancellor Dr. F. Cyril James welcomed the Visitor and the new Chancellor, and paid tribute to the work which the dental and medical faculties were doing under the wartime acceleration program. "No other faculty in the University has been asked by the government to adopt such a policy of acceleration; no other group of students has worked as hard or as consistently."

Dean A. L. Walsh, of the faculty of dentistry, presented 13 candidates for the degree of D.D.S. Dean John R. Fraser, of the faculty of medicine, presented 97 candidates for the degree of M.D., C.M.

Distinguished Guests.

Distinguished representatives of other universities took part in the convocation proceedings, including Hon. Charles A. Dunning, chancellor of Queen's University; Msgr. Olivier Maurault, rector of the University of Montreal, and D. C. Coleman, newly elected governor of McGill, who as trustee of Bishop's University represented that institution in the absence of George H. Montgomery, K.C., chancellor.

Governors of McGill present included W. M. Birks, Huntly R. Drummond, J. W. McConnell, Dr. W. W. Chipman, Arthur B. Wood, Paul E. Sise, Senator A. K. Hughes, Dr. C. W. Colby, Walter Molson, Dr. George F. Stephens, G. W. Spinney, H. A. Crombie, G. McL. Pitts, Ross Clarkson and Gordon Gale.

Deans of the various faculties, directors of schools, the warden of Royal Victoria College, and other members of the university Senate were included in the platform party.

Music was provided by the R.C.N. V.R. Band of H.M.C.S. St. Hyacinthe.

James Attends Plumber Banquet

Woodhead Speaks On Professors; Coeds Cater

Dr. James attended the Engineer banquet held in the McGill Union on Friday last, where he delivered a message from the chancellor, Mr. Morris Wilson, who was unable to attend because of illness. Dr. Woodhead, the guest speaker, addressed the undergraduates on the subject of professors; and Mr. Fraser Keith, president of the McGill Graduates Society, was present, this being the first time an official of the graduate body was invited to the banquet.

The Engineering faculties of Toronto, Queen's and U. of M. were represented by Paul Ackroyd, Jack Kirk, and Jean Ste. Marie. James Maclure, president of the Engineering Undergraduate Society acted as chairman.

Entertainment was provided by a quartet of fourth year Civils and Electricals, by Milo the magician, and by Ben Albert on the piano. The quartet's rendition of "We Have No Beer" was received with considerable applause.

The dinner was served by the coed architects, as an expression of the close cooperation between the two faculties.

Oslo Students Deported to Germany

ing for an unknown destination in Germany. Strong German guard detachments followed the students and extensive security precautions were taken by the German police upon their arrival in Oslo. Twenty relatives of the students were arrested in Oslo harbor when a crowd gathered to say farewell, and the Germans tried to prevent them from approaching the ship.

The Nazi-controlled Norwegian papers have not published a single word about the deportation, and official German quarters refused to comment on the matter as late as yesterday noon, but no denial of the above-mentioned facts has been given.

Before leaving Larvik the students were told that anyone attempting to escape would be shot. The rest of the interned academicians at Stavens are said to receive soldiers' treatment. The sanitary conditions of the camp are pictured as deplorable.

Oslo University was heavily guarded even as late as yesterday by "dependable" policemen, despite the fact that the last students were taken away several days ago. The University buildings are empty, facing the National Theatre recently gutted by fire.

4,000 Grads Serve on Active Duty

McGill Plays Important Part In War Effort

McGill University's pride in the contribution that the institution, its staff, graduates and students, is making to the war effort is stimulated by the fact that at the present time 4,854 graduates are serving the United Nations, nearly 4,000 of them on active service, according to Dr. F. Cyril James' report, issued last week.

The work of McGill scientists is referred to, with a great story, to be told after the war when censorship will be lifted. Emphasis is placed, too, on the work of McGill institutes. The Montreal Neurological Institute "has rendered a magnificent service during the present war. The increase in the number of patients cared for in 1942 over those cared for in 1935, the first full year of operation for the institute, was 68.4 per cent." The hospital facilities at the institute cannot meet the present demands upon them.

Among the achievements of the session was that of setting up the Allen Memorial Institute of Psychiatry in co-operation with Royal Victoria Hospital. Reference is also made to the establishment of the joint hospital committee to coordinate the work of the two teaching hospitals and the medical faculty at McGill for the further advancement of the teaching and practice of medicine.

Reference is made to the setting up of a special committee to investigate "the possibility of developing at this university a centre of research and training in the field of tropical medicine."

McGill Part Significant

In regard to education in Canada, the report points out that "McGill University has a significant part to play in these educational developments." A Senate committee has been set up and is at present studying "the problems which will arise within the university at the conclusion of hostilities, with a view to the formulation of a definite and satisfactory policy for the further education of those men and women who are demobilized from the armed forces under the terms of P.C. 7633, and several of the faculties have set up their own committees to cooperate in this work."

Looking to the larger field in which McGill serves the nation, Dr. James stated: "In every sphere of government, in industry and trade, in the learned professions and in the universities, the citizens of Canada must work with all their mind and all their strength for the attainment of the ideals which our lips readily profess. The extent of the contribution that McGill can make in the field of education, that essential discipline which enables men and women to use their freedoms wisely, will be determined by the effort that each one of us puts forth, now and during all the days that lie ahead. The splendid work during the past few years of Government, Faculties, and the non-teaching staff—a gallant band of men and women whose loyal cooperation and deep interest in the University has been an inspiration to me gives promise of a bright future."

on this type of study was emphasized. A committee was appointed to establish a firm foundation for a new organization, "La Societe Pothier."

A paper was presented to the group on the life of Robert Joseph Pothier. The noted French jurist was born at Orleans, January 9th, 1809. He studied law for the purpose of qualifying for the magistracy, and was appointed at the age of twenty-one, Judge of the Presidial Court of Orleans. This continued a tradition of his father and his grandfather. For the next 52 years Pothier studied and wrote on the French law.

It is said that law was his only love. He used to get up every morning throughout his life at ten o'clock and devote the entire day until four to Roman Law. He paid particular attention to the text of the Pandects. His "Pandectae Justinianae in novum ordinem digestae" being a classic in the study of Roman law. After a short rest he would turn to what was in his day French modern law and in this connection he wrote 36 volumes of commentary on the subject. In 1749 he was made a Professor of Law in

One of the main objects of the society will be to give every Law student a firm knowledge of the work of Pothier and of his contribution to their science. Today he is recognized as the authority and stands as the fountain from which the law pours forth. The next meeting of the society is being planned for after the Holidays, when a report will be heard on the preparation of a special edition of the master's work to be prepared by a select group of students of the Faculty.

It was announced that in her presentation, Miss Aikman will attempt to describe the characteristics of popular morality in general, questioning whether any morality held by the majority can be a good morality, for reference. Finally, Miss Aikman will endeavour to make the paper constructive by presenting some suggestions as to how bourgeois morality may be replaced by something more sound. The speaker has stated that she will approach the subject from a purely philosophical point of view.
